Perfect Timing

In this article I will focus on a theory that I have about the reasons we can sometimes capture E.V.P.'s and sometimes can't. Why is it some people can receive the haunted messages easily and others have no luck at all? Is it a mental aspect, geographical locations, certain times of the day or night, or is it simply controlled by ghosts and we have no way of determining when and where the next E.V.P. will be reordered? First I will look at three of the more important factors that most paranormal researchers document when they go out on a hunt: Solar X-rays, Geomagnetic Fields and Moon Phases.

When we go out for a night of researching the paranormal we often jot down these three items to look for patterns and try to determine when hauntings are more active. When the Solar X-rays and Geomagnetic Field are at their strongest it is also believed that spirits are more likely to appear to us because of all the magnetic energy and radiation surrounding the earth. Solar X-rays are an explosion in the sun when energy in twisted magnetic fields is released. Flares are a burst of radiation across the electromagnetic spectrum from radio waves to gamma rays. They come in five different categories: Normal, Active, M Class Flare, X Class flare and a Mega Flare (where an unpredicted x-ray event has occurred).

The Geomagnetic Field at the Earth's surface is 0.32 gauss at the equator and 0.62 gauss at the North Pole. They come in three categories:

Quiet, Unsettled, and Storm. Since it is believed that ghosts are more responsive when they can draw in electric magnetic energy, the best time to capture E.V.P.'s would be during a Storm where the field is at it's strongest. Could we also say that spirit activity is more responsive in certain areas of the world? If the field is stronger in the North Pole and the air is dryer, less energy would be lost due to less moisture and it would theoretically have a greater impact upon the manifestation of ghosts.

Moon phases have long been believed to affect people. It is though to put them in a different, more aggressive state of mind. If you talk to anyone who works in health care, you will more than likely hear several stories about full moons. The moon is illuminated by different degrees of sunlight. There are eight cycles that the moon goes through:

New Moon - The moon's dark side is facing the Earth. The moon is not visible (except during a solar eclipse).

Waxing Crescent - The moon appears to be partly but less than one-half illuminated by direct sunlight.

First Quarter - One-half of the moon appears to be illuminated by direct sunlight.

Waxing Gibbous - The moon appears to be more than one-half but not fully illuminated by direct sunlight.

Full Moon - The moon's illuminated side is facing the Earth. The Moon appears to be completely illuminated by direct sunlight.

Waning Gibbous - The moon appears to be more than one-half but not fully illuminated by direct sunlight. This (and not a full moon) is when paranormal activity is thought to peak.

Last Quarter - One-half of the moon appears to be illuminated by direct sunlight.

Waning Crescent - The moon appears to be partly but less than one-half illuminated by direct sunlight.

I honestly cannot find a logical explanation why this may have an effect on getting E.V.P.'s, but it is a cycle that the Earth goes through and it should be documented and looked at for patterns.

My theory on why we get E.V.P.'s is simply that the conditions have to be right. Whether it is a mental state, physical state, or the earth's electromagnetic levels have to be just right, there has to be a certain condition when a ghost can be photographed, video graphed, it's voice recorded or appear to the naked eye. In a residual case maybe the incident happened at a specific time of the day or when the temperature was at a certain degree and it is always the same on this date. There are many other conditions that should be looked at as well. The barometer, humidity, pollen and ragweed level, as it has been recognized that people who have regular paranormal experiences often have allergies. If you don't get many E.V.P.'s just keep trying. Sooner or later the timing will be perfect, the stars will align and you will capture these voices from beyond.
